

repair

Anything But Benign: Oppression Contributes to Cancer

Why do communities of color, survivors of violence, refugees and immigrant workers experience high rates of cancer? What do we do about the losses of loved ones due to poor healthcare? How can we start to address cancer as political, and preventing or surviving cancer as part of the work of racial, gender, disability, health, and economic justice?

This workshop is part of a series on "Politicizing Health and Wellness" sponsored by Repair, a health and disability justice organization based in Los Angeles.

WHO WE ARE

Repair is an L.A. based non-profit organization working on health and disability justice issues through research, education, and advocacy. This workshop is third in a larger series on the theme of "Politicizing Health & Wellness," offered free to the public.

DATE & TIME

Tuesday, 1/26/2016 @ 6:30pm

Location: Mercado La Paloma - 3655 S Grand Ave, Los Angeles, CA 90007

RSVP to repair.inquiries@gmail.com for address. Space is limited.

Image via Flickr Creative Commons

"Bring on the Taxotere" by Phil and Pam Gradwell (no changes made)

Link to license: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/2.0/legalcode>

WEBSITE: REPAIRFORJUSTICE.ORG

CONTACT US: REPAIR.INQUIRIES@GMAIL.COM